BULLETIN.—(By Associated Press.)
London.—Great Britain has formally advised France and Belgium that it can not recognize the separatist movement in the Rhineland or the establishment of an individual state in Cologne or other parts of the occupied area.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Dresden, Saxony.—The Saxons diet early today elected Dr. A. Fehlig as premier by a vote of 46 to 18. Seventy-one deputies were present, but the German nationalists left the hall before the vote was taken. The committee cast 100 ballots. After the election the house adjourned until Nov. 6.

Dr. Fehlig, a socialist, was a minister of economics before the recently deposed socialist-communist government was established.

CRISIS IS PASSING, IS BELIEF IN BERLIN CIRCLES.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin.—With the situation in Saxony gradually becoming stabilized, and the united socialists in charge of the new government there, political circles in Berlin expressed belief today that the danger of a parliamentary crisis here was passing. It was noted that the concentration of large Reichswehr forces in Saxony and suggested that army maneuvers were being held, and more especially to break up the armed "seibschutts" organizations, the existence of which cannot, in the opinion of the allied military commission, be permitted.

FAIR PRICES PAID AT HOLSTEIN SALE

Good Females Average $200—
Top Is $310 in Pabst Farm Homestead Bull.

Fair prices were realized on the registered Holsteins offered at the fall sale of the Rock county Holstein-Friesian Breeders' association held in the county pavilion, Janesville, Tuesday. The good quality females brought an average of approximately $200 and the 67 head offered brought $3,700, the sale average being $145.

The top of the sale was $310 on a yearling bull, Pabst King Iovanna, from the Pabst Stock farm, Oconomowoc, Wis., selling to E. E. Ball, Janesville, for $310. This Homestead bred sire is out of a 751 pound Junior two year old dam, Iovanna, from the Pabst stock farm, Oconomowoc, Wis., sold to E. E. Ball, Janesville, for $310. The sire of this bull is out of a 751 pound Junior two year old dam, Iovanna, from the Pabst stock farm, Oconomowoc, Wis., sold to E. E. Ball, Janesville, for $310. The sire of this bull is out of a 751 pound Junior two year old dam, Iovanna, from the Pabst stock farm, Oconomowoc, Wis., sold to E. E. Ball, Janesville, for $310.

The bulk of the stock sold to Rock county breeders building up their herds or to northern Illinois buyers. Unfavorable weather prevented Iowa and other buyers who would motor to the sale, from attending. The sale was well attended, there being around 500 in the pavilion during the afternoon. Every pedigree paper and test sheet was in the clerk's hands to be given to the buyer when settlement was made. A rule strictly enforced by the Holstein association of the county. There was no delay in getting out-of-the-state shipping orders.

J. E. McGinnis, of Port Washington, Edgar, Wis., motor to the auctioneers and F. H. Everson in the box. The sale committee was composed of Henry Wieland, Jr., John L. Bisher, Arthur H. Reid, Frank Milbrandt and A. A. McGinnis.

"Rock county Holstein breeders have advanced greatly in three years," declared F. H. Everson, who read pedigrees. "The sale committee here does things a little bit better than in any other county that I know of. There is no question about pedigree papers or health sheets. They are ready for the buyer."

BOOZE THROWN OUT WINDOW IN RAID

Hemming Held for Trial Nov. 7; Result of Discoveries by Police.

While police were searching the home of John W. Hemming, 418 South Jackson street, at 10:30 p. m. Tuesday afternoon, they were startled by a crash of glass in a second floor room and a thud on the ground outside. A moment later Mr. Hemming came down stairs and said hello to the officers. Investigation disclosed that a gallon can partially full of alleged alcohol had been thrown through a window pane of an upstairs bed-room, landing on the ground so hard that it sprang a leak and the officers were obliged to drain the contents into another can in order to preserve them.

At the close of the testimony, P. J. E. Wood, Hemming's attorney, offered a motion that the case be dismissed because the burden of proof was on the state in a liquor case where a private dwelling is involved, and that the state had failed to prove unlawful possession. He held it was not the intent of the prohibition law to prevent the possession of legally acquired liquor in a private home, declaring he had some himself, which he had obtained lawfully. Hemming had been in the state for five or six years for all the state had shown, Mr. Wood argued.

Mr. Dunwiddie replied and the judge over-ruled the defense's motion. "Nobody bought alcohol in a tin can five or six years ago—it was bought in bottles at the drug stores," said Mr. Dunwiddie. "If he had bought it prior to the prohibition law, would he have kept it in this long? Another thing that enters here, is the element of flight which is material. If Hemming knew the alcohol was lawfully acquired, why did he throw it out the window when the officers came?"

"The mere fact," replied Mr. Wood, "that the alcohol was in a tin can is nothing. We need something more than an inference to convict a man of unlawful possession of liquor in his house. I'm in favor of the 13th amendment but it should not make the people relinquish all their personal liberties."

Mr. Dunwiddie replied and the judge over-ruled the defense's motion.

"The mere fact," replied Mr. Wood, "that the alcohol was in a tin can is nothing. We need something more than an inference to convict a man of unlawful possession of liquor in his house. I'm in favor of the 13th amendment but it should not make the people relinquish all their personal liberties."

Will H. Dill, president of the Isaac Walton League of America, will arrive at 6:30 p. m. He will also talk. ## LIONS ENTERTAIN WAR VETERANS

State Legion Head in Address Advocates Immigration Cuts.

Amidst a background of American flags and bunting, the Lions club had a banner session at the Grand hotel Wednesday noon with veterans of foreign wars present as special guests.

In the main address, Vilas Whaley, Racine, state commander of the American Legion, told of some of the work which the Legion is doing today, especially along the lines of Americanization. He said that Americanization is the big work of the legion and that the men who come back from across the seas soon learned to appreciate the difficulty of becoming assimilated in industry and business life, and realize the importance of education.

"The Legion recognizes that life's greatest asset is education and wants better education, better schools and a better opportunity for our young," said Mr. Whaley, who pointed out that it was this fact that led the legion to favor restricted immigration, desiring to give all who come to these shores some training. This cannot be done when they come by the thousands, he declared. He said that because of a conspiracy between steamship companies and some people on this side of the Atlantic 100,000 illegals have been smuggled into this country in violation of the law.

Opposes Russia Recognition. Applause greeted his statement that the Legion was "unwaveringly" opposed to the recognition of soviet Russia, until she can clear the dark pages of her history, pages written in blood. He said "some of our public men who have advocated its recognition are now quietly receding to their offices and recasting their public speeches."

He paid tribute to the G. A. R. and hoped that the American Legion would receive an inspiration from them. He pledged the co-operation of the Legion to help the ex-servicemen in the Legion to help the community to "keep unsullied the Stars and Stripes and to keep the memory of the men who have crossed the Great Divide."

Past State Commander James T. Carle pleased the Lions with his eloquence and E. B. Holmstrom, Lake Mills, former Janesville resident and assistant adjutant general of the department of Wisconsin of the G. A. R., made a few remarks.

Kansas City—Reduction in freight rates on farm products in proportion to the decrease in the value of these products was advocated today by Walter Cravens, president of the Kansas City Joint Stock Land bank, as the most needed step for the relief of farmers. He said, however, that agriculture in the middle west, is far from a collapse.

In the Matter of High Buildings.

The Gazette has not commented in any way on the decision of the supreme court of the state in the matter of the restrictions on high buildings, though a propagandist newspaper in Madison has dared it necessary to say that the Janesville Gazette has opposed this law and that this and other newspapers of the state are looking only to the dollar and overlooking the cause of humanity. The Gazette does not answer for any other newspaper, but in the absence of any comment in this paper, the statement as to its position is clearly false and made on a guess. In the first place the Janesville Gazette believes in the integrity of the supreme court and when it declares a law constitutional that ends the question here. That is why we have the courts—as interpreters of the legislation in reference to the constitution.

The high building law may or may not be a good thing for a city. The Gazette never has questioned the constitutionality of the law but it has questioned the judgment of the law and so still does. It was passed for a reason. That was to keep the high buildings off the capital square in Madison and not to bury the beautiful state capital in a pocketed wall of brick and stone. But the question for other cities might well have been left to those cities themselves. It is a matter for local self government. Conditions may decide whether a high building should be erected in Milwaukee or other cities and those conditions be quite different from that of Madison.

Cities should be planned with a degree of regularity and for the purpose of utility as well as beauty. The steel building of many stories high has been found to be the safest and best in the world and made to stand greater disaster and against fire better than any other type. In the most recent pictures of Tokio, amid wreck and ruin of houses and public buildings from earthquake, there stand several monuments to American skill in building and the most impressive proof of the value of the steel type construction, which had its origin in America.

The public square at Madison, as it is now, is a ragged and unkempt place in any direction outside the capitol grounds, with the capitol itself set in the midst of beauty. The hit and miss and higgledy-piggledy style of architecture, boxes of buildings and plain chimneys of brick and stone, partly relics of old days and partly new patches or architecture, are not at all appealing. What Madison needs is not so much a law aimed at one or two individuals who would take away the old-rusty buildings and add some new and inviting ones, but a general instillation of a public spirit which will provide the most beautiful civic and business center in the state, if not the United States. The mere making of a law against high buildings is to take one bite only at a cherry.

When, however, a local situation is to be corrected and in order to correct it, the only means easily at hand is to lay the same rule down for other cities just as capable of regulation and decision as to what local conditions may demand as is Madison. It becomes dangerous legislation. There is no question as to its constitutionality now, but it is unfair to other cities and a violation of the principle of home rule.

Nearly all cities have advanced to the point where there is a city planning commission or a city plan which has to do with zoning, character of buildings to be erected in certain definite quarters of the municipality, and all that goes to obtain symmetry and harmony. But for a legislator to say what that building shall be in a community he may have never seen or probably will never visit, is an injustice and unfair.

Every person in the state has an interest in Madison. It is our capital; it is the center of state government, and the seat of greatest popular educational institution for higher learning in the United States. It ought to be a beautiful city. If any city needs a strict zoning ordinance Madison does. Its capitol square ought to be a thing of beauty. We do not believe it ought to be surrounded by the chimney order of structure regardless of symmetry or be a mass of little old Gopher Prairie buildings set among such towering ones. These things cannot be regulated by legislation. The rights of property guaranteed by the constitution interfere. Such a city can only be built by the united and harmonious action of those most concerned. Legislation can negative something; it takes more than statutory law to achieve the positive.

Andrew Mellon says there is undue apprehension about the situation in Europe. Much of it is manufactured to back argument for a league of nations.

A Square Deal for Every Child.

The work of the Kiwanis club for the underprivileged child is a positive factor in the community. It has already accomplished much. It has aided more than one child to start life on an even break with the more fortunate. The Kiwanis idea is that every child should be given a square deal in this old world, that he should have those physical defects that would hamper him corrected in young childhood. It takes money to carry out that program of service. Not so much, but a little cash is annually needed. To secure that fund the club will present its third minstrel show next week. It is more than a show; it is an institution in Janesville. It provides an easy, certain way of securing the funds wanted for the work. It also makes it possible for every person in Janesville to make a contribution to the fund and get a return in an enjoyable

A NEW POLITICAL CREATURE

By FREDERIC J. HASLICK.

Washington.—Not so long ago as to be forgotten by anyone who is not a victim of amnesia, Clifford Pinchot set about getting himself nominated and elected governor of Pennsylvania. His plans in that connection ran counter to the plans of certain leaders who constitute what has long been known as the G. O. P. machine in the Keystone state, and some of those leaders made the mistake of regarding them lightly.

One of them, in fact, indulged himself in a facetious moment in which he "allowed" that he would be "the guy who put the pin in Pinchot." That was good for many a laugh during the preliminary campaign, but it ceased suddenly to be mirth-provoking when those leaders awoke to the fact that Pinchot had the gubernatorial nomination nailed down, or wrapped up, or in whatever shape he wanted it. It was realized then that if anybody had stuck a pin into Pinchot it had merely prodded him to redoubled activity and made of him a wild, reckless, tearful candidate who could not be beaten.

And just now there are leaders outside Pennsylvania as well as in who would like to have a few minutes alone with the "guy," no matter who he may be, who really started Pinchot on his rampage; for the Pennsylvania executive has been doing things that do not endear him to the party chieftains. In fact, one might draw the conclusion that again he has plans that run counter to the plans of men who want what they want, if they want it, and are accustomed to getting it.

Among those present at the recent conference of governors was one who said that Pinchot was "a mustard plaster on the back of the republican party." Another gave vent to his emotions by remarking that "Pinchot is a hellbender and always has been."

Now, everybody knows that a mustard plaster is an irritant. It is supposed to be efficacious in many and diverse ailments, and there are those who have said that it would cause a man to forget all his other troubles. Accordingly it did not appear that Governor Pinchot was being unduly maligned or traduced when he was likened to a mustard plaster. But when he was called a "hellbender," that was something else again!

Recourse was had to the dictionary, but without avail. It included no such word as "hellbender." But that only made it more necessary to find the answer to the question as to just what a "hellbender" is. If the word were a bit of profanity, it was something to be avoided. If it were something new in political nomenclature, everybody would want to know all about it and be able to use it intelligently.

Whereupon an excursion into encyclopedic realms was organized, with almost immediate results of a satisfactory character. The "hellbender," it was learned, is a large salamander found chiefly in the streams emptying into the Great Lakes and those draining the western slope of the Appalachian mountains, and it is described as an animal "active chiefly at night, when its voracity causes great annoyance to fishermen whose bait and fish it devours."

With that definition in mind it is readily understandable why Governor Pinchot might be called a "hellbender." Assuredly he has been causing great annoyance to fishermen—those gentlemen who are angling for the presidency. To date he has not got away with the fish, but he certainly has been raising hob with the bait! In just one respect he may not be altogether comparable with the salamander—he is not active chiefly under cover of darkness. On the contrary, he seems to be busy all the time and to give no thought whatever to concealing his activities.

When the strike was on in the anthracite coal field there was much talk to the effect that the man who could bring about a settlement of that controversy would do much toward landing the presidential prize. Thereupon Governor Pinchot promptly stole that bait. He maneuvered himself into the situation in such a way that it was put up to him to settle the strike, and then he went out and did that little thing!

More recently the Pennsylvania governor has manifested a purpose to gobble up the prohibition enforcement bait in similar fashion.

It is not one of the traditions of the disciples of Isaac Walton that prohibition and fishing go hand in hand, or even have anything in common. In fact, it has long been held that to insure success and pleasure on a piscatory expedition there should be an abundant supply of bait that would never be approved under the provisions of the Volstead act. However, when it comes to the presidential fishing, 1924 it seems that prohibition must be reckoned with.

The question of why a nation is not bone-dry when it has a bone-dry law is one that will not come down, but the collateral issues as to what is to be done to enforce the Volstead act, and who is to do it, promise to be even more persistent and troublesome.

Governor Pinchot apparently has reached the conclusion that a policy of strict enforcement of the Volstead statute will be good bait for the presidential fish. He has said and said again indications that he purposes to do another "hellbender" stunt by stealing that bait, also. Under the eighteenth amendment the several states have concurrent power to enforce prohibition, and the governor has made a demonstration—some of his critics say it is only a gesture—to show what he will do in that line in his own balliwick.

At the same time, however, he insists that the larger responsibility rests upon the federal authorities. He not only calls attention to this view, but he also goes so far as to tell what the government ought to do about it.

Most of the governors who attended the recent conference evinced a disposition to pass the enforcement back to the national administration. They were not so explicit, though, in pointing out just what should be done, and it is obvious that some of them would rejoice if someone would take the enforcement issue out and lose it. Pinchot's various public statements and activities indicate that nothing of that sort will happen if he can prevent it.

Political leaders and observers, in their private comments, are inclined to ridicule the Pennsylvania governor and most of them insist that he has made a mess of whatever chances he had of landing the presidency. One or two of them, however, say that a "hellbender" is an extraordinary creature and requires a deal of watching.

It would look as though South Janesville was due for a complete cleaning. The district attorney has the same opportunity to permanently close the brick place that he had in the other. The question of ownership should not bother him when it comes to doing one's duty officially. The plague spots are plague spots no matter who has the deed to the property.

One of the big St. Louis brewers says this nation is going to wreck and ruin through prohibition. They need to save her is a few of the old time doggerels and several South Janesvilles. That will fix her up for sure and save the wreck.

JUST FOLKS

TITLE ART OF LOSING
Lord, when I'm being fanned at golf
Or bridge or what the game may be,
When all my shots are slightly off,
Please make a gentleman of me!
Teach me to fight to hold my place,
But let me lose with decent grace.

Lord, when it's not my day to win,
Let me not whimper or complain;
Teach me, at least, to keep my grin
Although my very best is vain.
Let me not curse my luck or wail,
Oh, teach my spirit how to fail!

Lord, when the odds against me lie,
Whatever good it is I seek,
Let me look failure in the eye
And still be kindly when I speak.
"Not victory alone I chooseo,
Teach me, Good Master, how to loseo.

Lord, when at last the score is known,
Let me not brag when I've shared the sport
Tell no ill-temper I have shown,
Or make of me a poor report.
Hard fighter? Yes, and blow for blow,
But not too keen for victory, though.

Lord, when defeat is mine to bear,
Let not my spirit be cast down;
Protect me from a gloomy air,
And save me from the cheerful frown,
And since it is an art to lose,
That art, before all else, I'd chooseo.

Who's Who Today

FRANK B. KELLOGG.

With the selection of Frank B. Kellogg of Minnesota former ambassador to Sweden, Col. George Harvey at London, a "mild reservationist" friend of the League of Nations and a supporter of the world court will succeed an irreconcilable isolationist in most important ambassadorial post in Europe.

From Col. Harvey to ex-Senator Kellogg is a transition of the diplomatic service from one type to another, as far apart as the north pole from the south. The retiring ambassador was famed for boldness, outspokenness and independence of thought and positive views on every body and everything. Mr. Kellogg is of the type of extreme caution.

Frank Kellogg was born at Potsdam, N. Y., Dec. 22, 1856. When nine years old he went to Minnesota with his parents, where he was educated in the common schools and was admitted to the bar in 1877.

Mr. Kellogg first hung out his shingle in Rochester, Minn., but removed to St. Paul in 1887 where he has since lived and practiced law. He first won national prominence as special counsel for the United States in cases against the paper and Standard Oil trusts of the United States. He was elected to the U. S. senate as a republican for the term 1917-20, and was defeated for re-election by Hiram Shipstead, Farmer-Labor candidate, a year ago.

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

A BROKEN VEIN
The layman's language is often as meaningless to the doctor as the doctor's to the layman. For instance, I haven't the remotest idea what kind of a "seed wart" is, though I gather from the queries of readers that it is a very common variety. And with 20 years of more or less intensive study of medical parlance, I am still uncertain what the laymen means by "bad complexion," though it must have some definite significance, for so many readers wish to know what would be good for it.

It was only recently that I stumbled on the word "macaroon" in a term which had always mystified me, and I experienced a thrill like that of the chap who achieves the solution of an arduous problem. The word was "leak." The difficulty was that it had fallen into the bad habit of thinking of the article as a joint, whereas, had I been more attentive, I should have noted the "leak" and the leak pretty much of all the calves or legs up to the tibial tuberosity or thereabouts—and that is what gave "leak" such a vague in the recent past. "Went" was the word, and the potential or earlier or functional stage of flat feet.

A broken vein is another lay term which has no certain meaning. Sometimes it signifies a dilated vein or venule, which shows through the skin; sometimes it means a raw spot or ulcer such as the common varicose veins; sometimes it means an actual break or rupture of the vein with hemorrhage.

The little dilated venules (they are little veins) which are so often seen on the cheeks or the nose, may be obliterated by electrolysis, but a physician or surgeon of skill should be consulted when such treatment is required.

The actual breaking or rupture of a varicose vein, an accident much feared by persons with the trouble, is caused in very many cases by a sudden effort, there need be no great bleeding. Elevating the limb above the level of the body and direct moderate pressure upon the bleeding place with the finger tip, or a small piece of gauze or the finger will stop the bleeding; the pad may be kept upon the spot by a simple bandage or a few strips of adhesive plaster. The patient should not get out of bed until the doctor has seen the vein in the control of such hemorrhage.

A. If the enlisted man recognizes the officer, even though the latter is out of uniform, he must salute him.

Q. Name the leading cities in India.
A. There are four great cities in India. They are the Brahmins, or priests; the military caste; the vaishya or hygienic caste, consisting of most of the industrial workers; and finally, the shudra, who till the soil.

Q. Into how many zones is the United States divided?
A. It is divided into four zones—western, central, mountain, and Pacific. There is three hours difference in time between New York and San Francisco. When it is noon in New York it is 11 a. m. in the central zone, 10 a. m. in the mountain zone, and 9 a. m. in the Pacific zone.

Q. Why is the lion sometimes referred to as the "king of beasts?"
A. The department of agriculture says this title was given to the lion because he roared in the jungle and because there is no other animal that can successfully meet it in combat.

Q. What expense are the Indians to the government?
A. The office of Indian affairs says the Indians are not considered an expense to the government. The annual appropriation for the Indians is more than offset by the value of the vast areas of land that have been ceded to the United States by them.

Q. Is fish as nutritious as meat?
A. Pounded for powder, fish contains as much protein as meat, and in some cases more. It therefore affords the most economical grade of food material as beef, mutton and pork.

Q. What breeds of horses are called draft breeds?
A. The Belgian, Clydesdale, Shire and Suffolk are known as draft breeds.

Q. Did the women of ancient Egypt cover their faces?
A. They did not wear veils.

Q. Are musical glasses old?
A. The first mention of musical glasses extant appeared in 1651.

Q. Why can't the stamps on signed envelopes be cut off and used?
A. The law provides that to be valid for postage, government stamps must be used in the envelope when separated from the envelope cannot be used. In other words, the envelope is part of the stamp, and the stamp is not valid for postage when removed from it. Provision is made, however, for redemption in other stamps and stamped envelopes spoiled in addressing or otherwise, and is serviceable, provided they are presented at the postoffice by original owner in a substantially whole condition.

Q. When was Australia discovered?
A. The first authenticated voyage was made by the Dutch in 1605. It is believed, however, that the country was visited by the French prior to that date, though there were no actual records. The first important explorations were made by Captain Cook, who visited the country in 1770.

Now add sugar, allowing five pounds to each two cups of water, set on the fire and cook to a third of an hour. Between your fingers will just barely string out an inch and a half or so. "You see! The boy is innocent!" I have not said that.

"But I have said it."

"Very good, you have said it; now go on."

"This was not so easy. But the lawyer was waiting, and waiting and I finally staggered forth: 'There is some small fact thus far successfully suppressed which when known will change the trend of public opinion and clarify the whole situation.'"

"Exactly, and till it is, we will continue the search for the will which I honestly believe lies hidden somewhere in that mysterious house. Had he destroyed it during that interval in which he was left alone, there would have been some sign left in the ashes on the hearth; and Wealthy denies seeing anything of the sort when he stopped to replenish the fire that night, and so does Clarke, who, at Edgar's instigation, took up the ashes after their first failure to find the will and carefully sifted them in the cellar."

"I have been wondering if they did that."

"Well, they did, or so I have been told. Besides, you must remember the look of intensest grief, if not of horror, which crossed your uncle's face as he felt that death was upon him and he could no longer speak. He had destroyed both the will and the one when alone, the other in the face of you all, he would have shown no such emotion. He had simply been eliminating every last trace of his daughter—something which should have given him peace."

"You are right. And as for myself, I propose to keep quiet, hoping that this mystery will soon end. But you think that the police will allow me to leave town?"

"Where do you want to go?"

"Back to work, to my desk at Meadows & Waite in New York."

"I don't think that I would do that. You will meet with much unpleasantness."

"I must learn to endure cold looks and hypocritical smiles."

"But not unnecessarily. I would advise you to take a room at the Sheldon. Live quietly and wait. If you wish to write a suitable explanation to your firm, do so. There can be no harm in that. His advice was good. I should at least be in the same town as Orpha."

"There is just one thing more," I observed, as I was about to leave his office door preparatory to my departure. "Did Edgar say whether he saw the wills themselves or like myself, only the two envelopes presumably holding them?"

He was shown them open. Mr. Bartholomew took them one after the other from their envelopes and, spreading them out on the desk, pointed out the name of Edgar Question, the son of my brother, Frederick, on the one, and Edgar Question, the son of my brother, John, on the other, and so stood with his finger pressed on the latter while they had their little scene. When that was over, he folded the two wills up again and put them back in their several envelopes, all without help, Edgar looking on, as I have no doubt, in a white heat of perfectly justifiable indignation. Can't you see the picture?"

"I could and did, but I had no disposition to dwell on it. A question teaspoon pepper. Cover with one pint of boiling water, and simmer until all vegetables are nearly tender. Then add corn, scallions and cut from three pars (or one cup canned corn). Cook minutes, add one-quarter teaspoon soda, and three cups hot milk which has been thickened with one tablespoon each of butter and flour melted together. Stir rapidly while adding milk. Serve hot with crisp toast in quarter slices. Serve four generously.

Cream of Spinach Soup—Two cups cooked spinach, two cups milk, three tablespoons butter or substitute, three tablespoons flour, one teaspoon salt, few grains nutmeg, slice of onion.

Chop the spinach until very fine, saying all the juice into it. Cook until the water is cooked off. Even the spinach through a coarse strainer.

Seal the milk with the onion. Melt the butter, add the flour and then stir in the spinach. Cook until the mixture thickens and add the spinach pulp, salt, pepper and nutmeg to season. Reheat and serve.

Apple Sauce—Two medium tart apples; cut into thin slices; cook in mounds in fairly small pieces—about eight; add 10 raisins. Mix with mayonnaise and serve on lettuce as garnish. Cook until the apples are tender. The stuffed celery hearts are served with the salad, the small, tender stalks filled with a mild cream cheese, such as York State.

Grapefruit Cup—Cut grapefruit in halves crosswise. Remove seeds with the tip of a sharp pointed knife. Scoop out pulp with spoon, add two tablespoons sugar to each grapefruit. Let stand several hours, preferably. Allow half grapefruit to a serving. Serve in fruit or sherbet glasses garnished with white cooked and sweetened cranberry or a tiny bit of mint leaf chopped fine.

By FRANK SINCLAIR

WISCONSIN'S secretless last Saturday has been giving followers of the Cardinal the blues ever since. All sorts of talk is heard in close-knit circles, in the parks, on the streets, over the "cokes," and at the cigar counter. But there is one thing fans have forgotten, every modern dump car has a means by which the bottom may be lifted up again. In other words, get on the sent with the driver and pipe down until the eleven has been reached from the car. Certainly last Saturday's quietest was an uninteresting one to watch particularly when the Rodgers did not win. It was even more uninteresting to follow over the radio through the eyes of a broadcaster who thought more than ordinary importance. State Chairman Judge Henry Graess of Green Bay has called delegates from each of the state chapters of the state to be present and out of their being here may come the first step in formation of a state Walton federation.

Wednesday's meeting is free. Invitations are extended by the local "Ikes" under whose auspices the meeting is held. To every man, woman and child. An address of silver oratory, force and wide appeal is promised from Judge Graess on "Outdoor America," talk of the "Outdoor America" by H. D. Dugan, founder and president of the Walton's of the nation. Moving pictures will be shown.

In addition to notices to each of the 200 members of Janesville club, announcements have been made through all fraternal and civic bodies in the city. Not only those who fish and hunt, but the motorist and lover of wild nature will find in the program plenty to arouse them, the Walton's state.

THE NORMAL school conference of Wisconsin is getting more and more into the limelight, due to an improved brand of football. # 'Ikes' Gather Here Wednesday to Hear Leaders

ROUSING MEETING OF NATURE LOVERS TO DRAW HEAVILY

From all over southern Wisconsin and from 20 cities of the state, lovers of the great outdoors will travel toward Janesville Wednesday to attend the Isaac Walton meeting at the high school auditorium here at 8 p. m. A crowd larger than the one that made the "Ike" meeting and banquet several months ago a marked success is expected.

Started as a small get-together project, the meeting has assumed more than ordinary importance. State Chairman Judge Henry Graess of Green Bay has called delegates from each of the state chapters of the state to be present and out of their being here may come the first step in formation of a state Walton federation.

Wednesday's meeting is free. Invitations are extended by the local "Ikes" under whose auspices the meeting is held. To every man, woman and child. An address of silver oratory, force and wide appeal is promised from Judge Graess on "Outdoor America," talk of the "Outdoor America" by H. D. Dugan, founder and president of the Walton's of the nation. Moving pictures will be shown.

In addition to notices to each of the 200 members of Janesville club, announcements have been made through all fraternal and civic bodies in the city.

KICKING TWIRL MOSTLY LUCK

By SOL METZGER

In a recent game, I noticed a punter kick a ball that would either rebound when it struck the ground or bounce up a kicker is able to impart backspin to a football in the same way a golfer imparts it to a golf ball.

A high punt is likely to bound either forward or backward and we have seen a low kicked ball bound backward when it struck the field. In nearly all cases, this is a matter of luck. If the ball happens to strike a certain way it will rebound backwards, that is, toward the kicker.

Many experiments have been tried by coaches to work out a system whereby backspin could be imparted to the ball. The idea is to kick one so that it drops near an opponent's goal-line, which most opposing catchers will let drop in the hope it will roll over the line for a touchback, and then have it rebound into the field of play. No one has solved the problem with consistency. The theory applied to kicking a ball for its results is to make a certain way it will rebound backwards, that is, toward the kicker.

Sol Metzger, our football expert, and one of the foremost football coaches in the country, will answer any questions about playing football sent him, care of our Sports Department. If a return, stamped, envelope is enclosed.

WINTER CONCERT SERIES PROPOSED

"Messiah" and Other Recitals May Be Given as Community Affairs.

Meeting at the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday afternoon, the community music committee discussed plans for fostering another series of Sunday afternoon community concert in the high school auditorium this winter. The matter of presenting "The Messiah" with a chorus of 100 or more voices was brought up, and it was agreed that efforts should be made to put on the concert sometime before Christmas and if possible to make it free to the public.

In the two previous years that "The Messiah" has been given it has been attended by capacity audiences who paid for admission but the hope this year is to make it possible for everyone to hear the masterpiece without cost. The only expense connected with the production is for a director, programs and special soloists, and it is hoped to defray these expenditures by other means than a general admission charge.

Members of the community music committee who attended Tuesday's meeting were: Ralph C. Jack, James G. Gregory, Mrs. J. G. Rexford, Mrs. J. R. Nichols, H. M. Bliss and Oscar N. Nelson.

County Teachers to Send Delegates to State Meeting

Rock county is entitled to two delegates at the convention, and those sending in their dues are to name the persons they desire to represent the county. STATE INTERESTED IN BANK CASE

Rights and Powers of State in National Bank Regulation.

Madison—The Missouri branch bank case, to which the state of Wisconsin was authorized to become a party by the U. S. supreme court last week, is one of the most important cases before the courts in recent years. In the opinion of Attorney General Herman L. Ekern, Mr. Ekern has just returned from Washington where he filed a motion asking permission to join in the suit as amicus curiae.

One of the principal questions raised in the suit, styled The First National Bank of St. Louis vs. the State of Missouri, is that of whether the state has authority to question powers exercised by a national bank within its borders. The attorney general of Missouri, together with attorneys general of 11 other middle western states, contend that the state has authority to question national banks' powers and to prevent organization of branch banks if desired.

The bank case has been set for further hearing before the supreme court on Nov. 22. A member of the attorney general's department, probably will represent Wisconsin at the hearing.

The bank case is of special importance to Wisconsin. Attorney General Ekern said, because state banking laws prohibit branches of state banks. It is pointed out that if it is held national banks can establish branches, state banks which are prohibited from doing so would be at a great disadvantage in their operations. In fact it is probably would result in the gradual elimination of state institutions from the banking field," Mr. Ekern declared.

Conferences are now on in Chicago of attorneys for the various states to determine procedure at the hearing before the supreme court. The principal contentions of the state attorneys general are: That the U. S. supreme court is without jurisdiction to review the judgment of the supreme court of Missouri, which upheld authority of the state to regulate branch banks, and that the national banking act confers no authority on national banks to establish and maintain branch banks, nor is such authority conferred by necessary implication.
